

Charm Person

This spell causes the target creature to consider the wizard a trusted friend and ally to be heeded and protected. The spell does not enable the caster to control the subject creature as if it were an automaton, but anything the caster says or does is automatically seen in the best possible way. Thus, the subject creature wouldn't follow an order to commit suicide, but he might believe the caster if assured that the only possible way to save the wizard's life is for the subject creature to hold back an onrushing dragon "for just a couple of minutes". The spell also doesn't convey any special linguistic or communicative skills to the caster; he must already have a language in common with the subject to communicate with it.

This spell has no required gestures.

For the purposes of this spell, the term "person" applies only to the races open to Player Characters, plus man-like creatures like lizard men, frog-men, ratlings, and others.
